Property Details

Finca Palo Grande is a nature lover's dream property. Appropriately named, Palo Grande means large tree in Costa Rican Spanish. This property is full of large mature trees, with a giant Espavel (Wild Cashew) tree towering over one of the easily accessed swimming holes. Most of the property's 45 hectares (111 acres) are covered in lush primary forest with a small river winding through the farm, creating multiple refreshing, clear water swimming holes featuring cascading waterfalls. There is a system of trails on the property that makes easy access for hiking, horseback riding, or riding an ATV to the ocean view lookout and swimming holes. The ocean view mirador looks back to Quepos and Manuel Antonio and with an improved road, it would make an excellent building area. There is also abundant wildlife in this area, and with most of the property covered in the primary forest, this property already acts as a nature preserve.
